

WHY

Because the camps are FUN—yeah!
And, in the process, kids will learn how to THINK!

Thinking is essential:

- for constructive communication
- for healthy mental and emotional development
- for dealing with the pressures of life
- for good judgment & for self-growth

Thinking is learning:

- to listen to each other
- to ask interesting questions
- how to make connections between ideas
- how to build on each other's ideas
- what reasons are and how to express them
- to think before you act

SPRING BREAK CAMP

25-29 March, 2024

Do you want your child to have the 'thinking tools' to solve problems, make good decisions, confidently self-express, be open to exploring different ideas, and transform imagination into innovation?

then
THE THINKING PLAYGROUND
camp is just what you have been looking for!

Camp Theme

BORDER BUSTERS Ages 10-13

Welcome to the Border Busters Thinking Playground Camp. This camp combines invited workshops including artistic activities like pottery, photography, Tibetan gong meditation and painting, with philosophical inquiries and a lot of FUN (see also the beautiful DAILIES on the website!) Will you be able to bust the border between humans and robots, between extraterrestrials and intra-terrestrial or between your true self and fake self? Will you join the secret society of philosopher-alchemists? And...will you be able to find the Griffon's egg?

The theme of Border Busting runs throughout this camp, creating a fun way to think about topics like our identity, our inside and outside, what the challenges of living in groups, the role of art, and how you can bring about social and personal change. Are you ready to BUST some borders?!

Integrated Curriculum

Our team combines scholarly expertise, a commitment to thinking and community-building with our love of working with children. Our integrated curriculums combine artistic activities with philosophical inquiries to cultivate critical, creative, caring, and collaborative thinking.

To ensure the quality of the inquiries, activities the sense of community and of the camp we accept a maximum of ten students per camp.

The Vancouver Institute of Philosophy For Children with its Thinking Playground camps are now bringing "fun" and "thinking" to youngsters at ICSA by putting on camps with carefully crafted curriculums and a unique pedagogical approach.

"Thinking is not a matter of memorization. It requires immersive learning experiences that teach you to think."

WHO

Arthur Wolf (Dr. Wolf), graduate of the University of British Columbia and Associate Director of The Vancouver Institute of Philosophy for Children (www.vip4c.ca), together with Susan Gardner (Dr. Sue), graduate of Oxford University, Philosophy Professor at Capilano University and Director of VIP4C will supervise the construction of the philosophically-based programs, as well as the implementation.

In addition, Dr. Wolf will be present throughout the camp experience and facilitate our 'Community of Philosophical Inquiries' or CPIs. The camp team will include at least two additional counsellors, invited workshop instructors and we will ensure that the ratio of counsellor/camper never falls below 1/6 campers.
